It is stated that Tuan Fank enter-tains a project of establishing an en-gineering coilege at Shanghal and is considering the purchase of the To Shu company's (Chinese publishing company) new printing offices on the-chinese bund for the college buildings. The price of the building is agreed at 170,000 taels (about $110,000 gold).

The great possibilities of the kettle-drom as a musical instrument have been urged to the London Society of Arts by G. C. Cleather. He finds it comparable to the violin in the exquisite effects attainable but the tone, like that of the violin depends upon the performer. He hopes to see a scholarship founded to encourage study in this neglected field.
